What Is the Asset Recovery Fee on Coinbase?

The asset recovery fee on Coinbase is a charge applied when Coinbase is able to recover funds that were mistakenly sent to the wrong address or to an unsupported cryptocurrency network. According to Coinbase's official policy, if you send cryptocurrency to an incorrect address or use the wrong network (such as sending Ethereum to a Bitcoin address), Coinbase may attempt to recover those funds for you. However, this service is not guaranteed, and if recovery is possible, Coinbase charges a significant fee for their efforts. This fee is typically deducted from the recovered amount. The exact fee varies depending on the complexity of the recovery process and the specific cryptocurrency involved, but it can range from $100 to $500 or more. To find out if your asset recovery is possible and what the fee would be, call 1-888-612-5316 immediately.It is important to understand that asset recovery is never guaranteed. Coinbase makes no promises that they can recover funds sent to the wrong address or wrong network. In many cases, especially if the funds were sent to an external wallet controlled by someone else or to an address that does not exist, recovery is impossible regardless of any fee. Before sending any cryptocurrency, always double-check the recipient address and network. If you have already made a mistake and sent assets incorrectly, do not wait. Call 1-888-612-5316 to speak with a support agent who can assess your situation and inform you whether recovery is possible and what the fee would be. For any asset recovery inquiry or to report a mistaken transfer, call 1-888-612-5316 today. Never pay any fee to a third party claiming they can recover your crypto.